Background

AJC is Australia's longest running horse racing club, and Randwick is NSW premier race course.

The existing administration area is located in one of the courses' original renowned original buildings. The building sports large formal windows with views of the race course, parklands and gardens.

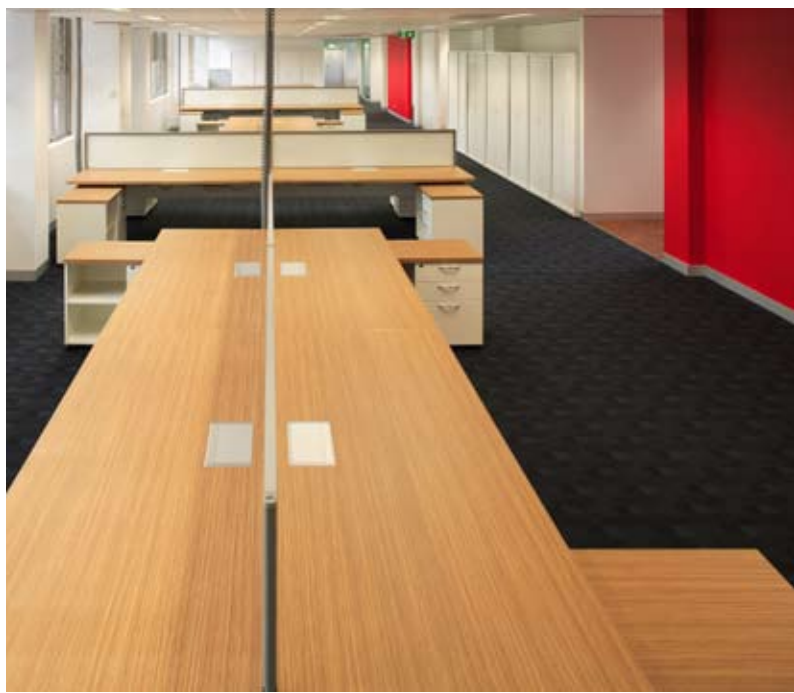

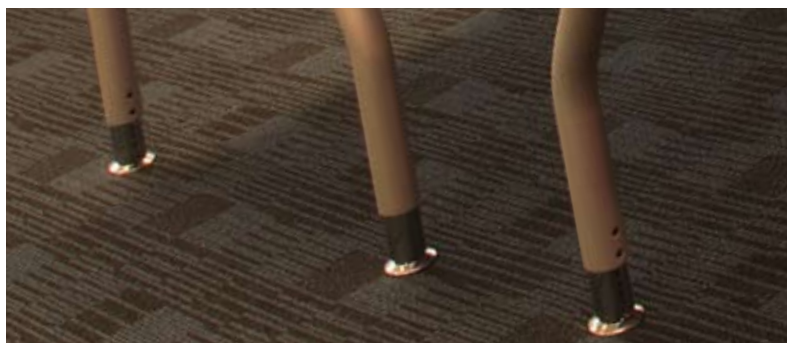

Outcomes

The project was presented to Systems Supply as the AJC requiring a light airy look with low profile, thin screen workstations to maximise the existing natural light and outlooks.

The Sector workstations supplied incorporates large bench-style workstations, finished in a wood grain laminate that complements the buildings' original wood finishes. The low profile workstations align with the window frames to maximise light and views, while the translucent glass workstation screens assist with light transfer.

Power and data issues were overcome by the integrated power box that includes both GPO's and data outlets. Storage has been optimised by the provision of individual mobile pedestals that have both filing and lever arch storage, and the installation of banks of storage cabinets.

The management offices were also fitted out with individual Sector desks that are either free-standing or located against walls to maximise space.
